

LABOR FARED RATHER WELL IN LEGISLATION

Ninety-Two Laws In Its Interest Were Passed
This Year

TWO NATIONAL LAWS

Review of the Work Done
By Eleven Legislatures

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Ninety two labor laws have been passed by Congress and state legislatures during the past legislative year, according to a survey which was made public tonight by the American Association for Labor Legislation on the eve of Labor day. "The most significant items in this legislation," says the Secretary, Dr. John B. Andrews, "are two national laws, one prohibiting the shipment of interstate foreign commerce of certain products in the preparation of which the labor of children has been employed, and the other providing a model scale of workmen's compensation for personal injuries among federal employees which there are now more than $50,000,000 of federal labor bills were introduced into Congress this year," Dr. Andrews adds, "while eleven state legislatures in spite of the 'reaction' brought out their share of the annual work."

The Association's summary of the more important items of labor legislation in various states follows:

Three states, Maryland, Massachusetts and South Carolina concerned themselves with the legal regulation of collective bargaining. In Maryland a state board is authorized to prescribe rules of procedure for arbitration of industrial disputes including power to conduct investigations and hold hearings to summon witnesses and enforce their attendance to require the production of books, documents and papers, and administer oaths, exercising these powers to the same extent that such powers are possessed by the civil courts of the state. South Carolina created a board of three members to investigate and to promulgate to agreement in strikes and lockouts at the rate of ten dollars per day each. Massachusetts amended her law regulating the procuring of strikers.

During the year seven of the eleven states holding regular legislative sessions passed new or strengthened old laws affecting child labor. Shorter hours, a higher minimum age, prohibition of night work and exclusion from hazardous employment are the main tendencies. South Carolina raises the minimum work age from twelve to fourteen, while Massachusetts and New Jersey make special provision for pupils who study part-time in vocational schools and work part time.

Impelled by recent accidents in New Jersey, she has joined the list of states requiring passenger elevators to have interlocking device automatically preventing movement of elevator until shaft door is locked and securely fastened.

Following the limitation of working hours on public work to eight a day in the majority of states, Massachusetts this year provides for her public employees in the further limitation of the forty-eight hour week. In private employment several states place additional safeguards around the employment of women and children during the Christmas shopping season, and Massachusetts is to investigate the possibilities of one day of rest in seven for employees in hotels and restaurants.

Legislation authorizing public employment bureaus in Maryland and the creation of a bureau of farm settlement for immigrants in New York is supplemented by the California legislature's endorsement of the United States department of Labor recommendation that the public land survey be so regulated as to insure the settled the entire product of his labor.

South Carolina and Virginia patched up their employees' liability laws while Kentucky enacted the most progressive workmen's compensation law in any southern state. Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York strengthened their compensation laws without, however, equaling the new national law for injured federal employees which is termed "the most scientific and most liberal workmen's compensation law in the world." Maryland enacted a mothers' pension law and Massachusetts created a commission on social insurance to study sickness, unemployment and old age and to recommend insurance legislation next January.

The reorganization and unification of the administration of labor laws continues, the most noteworthy change this year being in Maryland and New Jersey where they were taken toward consolidation of factory and inspection of workmen's compensation administration.

Error a Small One But Spoiled the Ad

Typographical errors are extremely easy to make and frequently they are of such a nature that the correct reading is obliterated. An advertisement which was printed in the West Virginian Saturday contained an error which was not quite so plain and while it consisted in the change of just one little figure it had the effect of altering the meaning of the whole announcement. The advertisement was that of the Fairmont Vulcanizing company which contained a statement signed by J. W. Hinzman, resident manager of the Standard Oil company, certifying to the quality of the gasoline sold by the Vulcanizing company is the same 68 degree Standard gasoline sold by any other dealer in Fairmont. The types made it read 60 degree gasoline which is not a first class article. The advertisement is being re-run today with the error corrected.

LINCOLN'S LOG

zation; Robert Collier, vice president and chairman of the executive committee; Clarence H. Mackay, treasurer, and Richard Lloyd Jones, secretary.

Immediately upon the formation of the association a campaign for funds with which to build a Lincoln Memorial Hall over the original site of the Lincoln cabin was begun.

The response came quickly from all sections of the country, and from no section more quickly or rapidly than from men and women of the South, who vied with the citizens of other parts of the United States in the desire to pay tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln.

The corner stone of the memorial hall was laid by Theodore Roosevelt, February 12, 1909, on the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the "Great Emancipator." On November 9, 1911, it was formally dedicated by President William H. Taft. Today it became the property of the whole American people.

To its construction more than 270,000 persons contributed amounts ranging from twenty-five cents to $25,000, which totaled approximately $383,000. The balance from this fund after paying for the construction of the memorial hall and for the preliminary work of turning the farm into a great public park is the sum which today was turned over as an endowment fund for the maintenance of the building and grounds.

The hall is a beautiful granite building standing on the top of a small hill. It faces toward a big spring at the bottom of the slope, which proved the determining factor in the choice of Thos. Lincoln, Abraham Lincoln's father, when he was casting about for a site upon which to build his home.

Rising from the bottom to the top of this slope is a long flight of wide granite steps, flanked on either side by a hedge of poplar trees together with a box hedge. A box hedge also surrounds a small place at the foot of the steps, in the middle of which is a tall flag pole from which the stars and stripes will always be kept waving.

Inside the big granite building the Lincoln cabin stands upon the spot on which Thomas Lincoln erected it 110 years ago. It is surrounded by a heavy bronze chain for no one is to be permitted to enter its portals. Upon the interior walls of the memorial hall is a record of the Lincoln ancestry.

Over the entrance to the building is the following inscription:
"Here over the log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born, destined to preserve the union and free the slave, a grateful people have dedicated this memorial to unity, peace and brotherhood among these states."

The little log cabin remained the home of Abraham Lincoln until he was about nine years old, and then his father decided to remove his family to Indiana. This decision was made partly because the farm was so poor it was a matter of difficulty to bring a living from its soil, and partly because the insecurity of Thomas Lincoln's title made his hold upon his home precarious.

Yet poor as this home was it was here that Abraham Lincoln enjoyed about the only real boyhood he ever knew, for with the removal of the Lincoln family to Indiana, many of the burdens of manhood were thrust upon the childish shoulders.

The farm remained in the hands of the family of the first purchaser for about twenty-five years, until it was bought by A. W. Dennett, who intended to convert it into a public park. This became impossible because of financial reverses, and it was because of these reverses that the farm was offered sold, the proceeds to go to Mr. Dennett's creditors.

From the time Thomas Lincoln removed to Indiana, from which state he later removed to Illinois, the farm had declined and presented for many years a woeful scene of neglect.

So poor was it that a caretaker who agreed to pay the taxes upon the property for the privilege of occupying it was thought by his neighbors to have made a bad bargain. Yet, the ground is so situated that at comparatively small expense the work done by the Lincoln Farm Association can be readily extended so as to make of it an attractive park. A fine winding road of about a mile leads from the entrance of the farm to the Lincoln Memorial Hall. The boundaries of the property are marked with brick pillars capped with cement. Along the turnpike, leading from Hodgenville, which divides the property, the boundary is marked with an old fashioned worm fence built of rails, such as Lincoln himself split.

"CAMILLE" OFFERED AT HIPPO TODAY

Large Advance Sale. Indicates House Will Be Filled at Matinee

The Lewis-Oliver Players will commence their third week at the Hippodrome Theatre this afternoon when they will offer for the first time here the original version of "Camille." Mr. Lewis has secured this version, which is the same used by Sarah Bernhardt for many seasons, through his New York agent and this will be the first time it has ever been presented in this city.

Miss Edna Grandin, who has played the title role more than one hundred times, will appear at her best in this play, and during the play she will wear several very handsome gowns. For the past week carpenters and scenic artists have been busy arranging the production and it will be complete in every detail.

At the matinee today all seats will be reserved and the regular night prices charged. There has already been a large sale and there is little doubt but that the Hippodrome will be filled by the time the curtain rises on the first act.

"Camille" will be the offering for the first three days of the week with matinees on both Monday and Wednesday. This will be followed by a big production of the greatest of all sensational white slave plays, "Why Girls Leave Home." For the remainder of the season Mr. Lewis will offer nothing but the very best plays that can be secured for stock and each one will be given a complete scenic production.</
